<tr>
<td>What is it?</td>
<td>Plagiarism occurs when you use someone else’s words or ideas without giving credit to the original author.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What rules govern it?</td>
<td>Academic and other institutions often follow ethical codes regarding academic integrity which prohibit plagiarism and other misconduct.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Who enforces the rules?</td>
<td>Instructors, academic units, and institutions as a whole may enforce a variety of penalties for plagiarism. At OSU, alleged infractions are referred to the Committee on Academic Misconduct (COAM) for investigation and disciplinary action.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How can I avoid it?</td>
<td>Use quotation marks and ellipses when quoting directly from another source. When you summarize or paraphrase material, restate it in your own words. Whether quoting or paraphrasing, always credit the source!</td>

Plagiarism and Copyright Infringement

Plagiarism and copyright infringement are not the same. You can plagiarize without infringing copyright, and you can infringe copyright without plagiarizing. Although they are two separate concepts, plagiarism and copyright infringement can occur at the same time.

Example: Plagiarism, NOT copyright infringement

You copy a few sentences word for word from On the Origin of Species by Charles Darwin for your report on evolution, but you do not cite the original work or acknowledge the author. This is plagiarism because you have presented someone else’s work as your own. However, it is not copyright infringement because the copyright term for On the Origin of Species has expired; this means that the work is in the public domain and is no longer protected by copyright.

Example: Copyright infringement, NOT plagiarism

You create a website to provide information to the public on an important topic. To make your material more engaging, you search the internet for decorative or funny images and include at least one image on every page of your site. You are careful to cite the source of each image. This is not plagiarism because you have properly cited the source of each image. However, this could be considered copyright infringement because materials found online are protected by copyright even if they are not accompanied by a copyright notice, and you are reproducing and distributing copies (two of the exclusive rights of rights holders) of a protected work without permission (and no statutory exception applies). You can avoid copyright infringement in this situation by using images that are in the public domain or licensed for your use (such as Creative Commons licensed materials).

Example: Both plagiarism AND copyright infringement

You post a recently published short story by your favorite author to your blog, and claim that you wrote it yourself. This is plagiarism because you are using someone else’s work without giving them credit, and it is copyright infringement because you are reproducing and distributing copies (two of the exclusive rights of rights holders) of a protected work without permission (and no statutory exception applies).

Example: Neither plagiarism NOR copyright infringement

You include several short quotes from scholarly articles in your research paper and you include citation information for each source. This is not plagiarism as you have clearly identified third party material in your report by using quotation marks and providing citations to the original sources. This is also not copyright infringement because the use of short quotes in research is a widely accepted example of Fair Use: a statutory exception included in U.S. Copyright Law.

*Exclusive rights:

Copyright grants five exclusive rights to the creator of a work. Those five rights are:

- Reproduce or make copies of the work
- Distribute copies of the work
- Create a derivative work
- Display the work publicly
- Perform the work publicly

Statutory exceptions:

Copyright law includes statutory protections that permit the use of copyrighted materials without permission under certain circumstances. Fair use is one such protection that is commonly used. Visit go.osu.edu/fairuse to learn more.
